- Confidentiality Information gathered during research or therapy must be kept confidential and protected from unauthorized access.
- Beneficence and Nonmaleficence Research and therapy should be conducted in a way that maximizes benefits and minimizes risks to participants.
- Competence Psychologists must ensure they have the necessary training and skills to provide effective and ethical services.
- Professional boundaries Maintaining appropriate boundaries in relationships with clients and research participants is essential to avoid exploitation or conflicts of interest.

The Early Seeds of Psychology The roots of psychology can be traced back to ancient Greece where philosophers like Plato and Aristotle grappled with questions about the nature of the mind, consciousness and perception. However, psychology as a formal discipline emerged in the 19th century.

Wilhelm Wundt: The Father of Experimental Psychology Wilhelm Wundt, a German physiologist, is widely considered the father of experimental psychology. In 1879, he established the first psychology laboratory in Leipzig, Germany. Wundt's approach, known as introspectionism, involved carefully observing and recording one's own thoughts, feelings, and sensations.

Sigmund Freud: The Unconscious Mind and Psychoanalysis Sigmund Freud, an Austrian neurologist, revolutionized our understanding of the human mind with his theory of psychoanalysis. Freud believed that the unconscious mind played a crucial role in shaping our thoughts, emotions, and behaviors. He developed techniques like free association and dream analysis to access the unconscious.

William James: The Functionalist Perspective William James, an American psychologist, emphasized the importance of understanding how the mind functions in helping us adapt to our environment. His functionalist perspective focused on the practical applications of psychological knowledge.

Schools of Thought: A Diverse Landscape Throughout the 20th century, different schools of thought emerged in psychology, each with its own unique perspective and emphasis.

- Behaviorism Founded by John B. Watson, behaviorism focused on observable behaviors and their relation to environmental stimuli. It rejected the study of internal mental states, arguing that they were too subjective and difficult to study scientifically.
- Cognitive Psychology This school of thought emerged in the 1950s, emphasizing the role of mental processes such as memory, attention, and problem-solving in understanding human behavior.
- Humanistic Psychology Led by figures like Carl Rogers and Abraham Maslow, humanistic psychology focused on the study of human potential, self-actualization, and the importance of a supportive environment for personal growth.

humanistic psychology challenged the deterministic views of behaviorism and psychoanalysis emphasizing individual agency selfactualization and the importance of subjective experience
